Hunting Fatigue Near

David C. Blow, of Calgary, instantly killed as he rose from cover into the line of a second shot fired after a flock of ducks on Saturday afternoon by Park Oliver, farmer, of Olds.

Mr. Blow and his two sons, Harry T. 17 and Arthur, 15, had been hunting ducks on Mr. Oliver's farm, six miles northwest of Olds, since Wednesday. The deceased and the farmer had been friends for more than thirty years and Blow usually visited his friend during the hunting season.

The fatal accident occurred on the edge of a slough near Sylvan Russell's farm, about seven miles northwest of Sundre, early Saturday afternoon. One of the boys had been sent to fetch a flock of ducks out of the water towards the hunters.

Blow and Oliver were crouched in the long grass close together. Each hunter fired a shot and as the birds swung around low over Blow's head from Oliver, the latter fired again. Just as he did so, Blow rose in front of him and the shot entered the back of his skull.

Mr. Blow had promised his two boys a hunting trip if they passed their examinations. The expedition which culminated in his death was the boys' reward for diligence.

Dr. C. C. Hartman, coroner, and Constable W. Dobbin, of the A.P.C. at Olds went to the scene, where the coroner decided that an inquest would not be necessary. Mr. Oliver is recognized as an excellent shot and an expert hunter.

Schools Field Day.

Despite the cool weather last Friday, one of the best interschools and the meets held in this district was run off. The two of football and the contestants a very sincere and hearty reception by cheering all places of business during the afternoon and everyone turned out to see the events. The field was in good shape, the program well organized and the events run off well on schedule.

The Didsbury team made a very good showing, winning third place in the total number of points won. All the contestants whether winning or losing, behaved in a sportsmanlike manner and made a very creditable showing for the town. They were fortunate in having three medal winners among their competitors, viz: Leonard Bensch, 2nd and Naval Honey, 3rd in the boys' open class, and Inga Sisk, 3rd in the girls' open class.

The results of the events on the whole were surprisingly good, considering the cold weather prevailing. Margaret Fitzpatrick's performance was outstanding. In the 100 yds. dash, this Crossfield girl equaled the Dominion record of 12 secs. and over all the other events in which she was entered by a wide margin. Art Scott, of Olds was the leading athlete of the day in the boys' open class, winning the medal for the greatest number of points secured in his class.

Under the new system, Crossfield won the cup for the grand aggregate of points, although they came second in the actual number of points won. The standing of the schools was as follows: Olds 113; Crossfield 92; Didsbury 75; Innisfail 61; Carstairs 38; Bowden 37.

Home-Taught Fears

What has been described by one writer as "far and away the most conclusive tests of character ever made, since Adam and Eve reared Cain and Abel and made a moral success of one boy and a moral failure of the other" were the elaborate studies recently undertaken by two professors of Columbia and Yale Universities. These scientists tested the character attitudes of over 10,000 school children from eight to sixteen years old, under "normal" school and home conditions. The children did not even know they were being scientifically studied. The net result of these intricate and reliable tests was to show that among agencies in having the greatest influence in building human character, the "home" outweighed the school, the church, the Sunday School, the movies and sports all combined.

This is fact number one for parents to consider. The second in importance is where and how home influence and training makes or mars the child life within its walls. There are three phases of home life out of which are developed the emotional patterns or habits which will make boys and girls into self-reliant men and women, able to meet an imperfect world with high ideals of their own. These phases are, first, the attitude between husband and wife; second, the attitude of sisters and brothers toward each other; and third, the attitude of parents toward children.

Let us take a look at the way in which these home attitudes foster the one emotional attitude which affects our lives more than any other and extends as a sort of background through nearly all the others. This is self-confidence as opposed to fear—not fear of some special thing but a rather generalized fear of life itself.

Vast numbers of people who will face death on a moment's notice, who go through all sorts of real dangers without a quiver, have yet a sort of underlying fear of life's possibilities that seldom leaves them. It is easy to fall into these generalized fears, and there are thousands of ways in which parents actually teach this state of mind to their children. One of the amazing discoveries made by doctors during the examinations in the World War was, that so many perfectly healthy young men had all their lives been convinced that they had heart or kidney trouble or some similar malady and had feared to undertake arduous occupation for that reason. In nearly all cases their fears had been started by hearing symptoms discussed at home.

What is "fear" anyhow? Well, the scientists have done a world of work in the last thirty years on fear, and they find there are three distinct kinds. The first is natural or biological fear—the kind that preserves you from natural peril; the second is intelligent or constructive fear—the kind you get from sound, healthful education; and the third is pathological fear—destructive fear that comes from a wrong view of life, from wrong comparisons of yourself with other people, from wrong attitudes toward your job, and from telling yourself instantly you are not as important as others. As a rule there are just three people who ever tell you you are no good—your parents, your brothers or sisters, and yourself. And nine times out of ten you have begun to tell yourself you are no good because your mother, or father, or brother, or sister, in some way first destroyed your self-confidence.

For example, you hear many people assert they are naturally afraid of lightning, or bursters, or something of the sort. This is not true, because there are but two things that people are "naturally afraid of." The first is a loud noise, and the second is the sense of falling. Dr. John Watson and his students have tried in hundreds of ways to frighten babies, but these are the only two ways in which they have succeeded.

Many mothers say, "My child has always been afraid of the dark." Oh, no, the mother taught it to be afraid. She put the babe to bed and went out and slammed the door, or talked loudly, or scolded, or dropped a basin on the floor. Or, when it got a little older, the mother talked about being afraid of the dark herself, or told the child something dreadful that was likely to happen in the dark.

And it is just this way that children are taught to be afraid of life. Parents need to be taught on the many ways in which they actually teach their children to be afraid of life by shielding them from responsibility. They are missing the greatest educational opportunity this world offers when they fail to put as much responsibility on the child as he can reasonably carry just as early in life as is possible. In this way you build up habits of success instead of habits of failure, courage habits instead of habits of fearing life and dodging its responsibilities.

There has nothing contrary to the duty of teaching the children the second kind of fear—intelligent fear, which is merely teaching them good judgment in avoiding dangers and destructive habits. This kind of fear is merely the negative side of character building and should be carried through to the constructive or positive side, that is, to the development of ideals and emotions of good to be reached and battle to be won. The greatest duty of parents is to fill their children's minds with the belief that they can meet these duties and battles with satisfaction and success.

When intelligent fear is carried to the point of exaggeration it becomes the third fear—diseased or pathological fear. The way out is to develop logical judgment of our own powers and those of our friends. When this is done honestly, when you think "in detail" of your own powers of body and mind and compare them with these same qualities in others, you will be astonished to find that you are superior in most respects to the very people you have taught yourself to be afraid of.

But the great lesson for parents is, that all these attitudes, both destructive and constructive, are chiefly developed in the home. And since Nature has given us but two infants, boys and girls, and all others are learned, and since the home is the greatest agency in the world for teaching all our emotional attitudes, the very large question every family should answer is, "Are we as parents or brothers and sisters teaching ourselves and one another to meet life with fear, self-deprecation and doubt, or are we trying to be a daily inspiration to one another to meet life with self-confidence and good cheer that calls out each one's best energies?"

The answer to these questions will have more effect on the happiness and success of every member of the family than anything that ever has been or ever will be taught in school or college.

Could Not Check the Summer Complaint A Few Doses Did It

Mrs. B. Coulter, 518-11th Ave. E., Calgary, Alta., writes: "Last summer my youngest son was very bad with summer complaint, and everything he ate he would vomit, and he got so thin I became very much worried. I could not get the discharge checked, so I went to the drug store and gave me a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and told me it would stop the trouble if anything. After I had given the boy the first few doses I noticed the discharges were being checked, and in was not long before he was well again."

Air Mail Service To Akavik Necessary

Paying Its Way and Must Not Be Abandoned

Whatever happens to the prairie mail that to Akavik simply must not be abandoned. It was stated by Mr. Veniot, former postmaster-general that under the old system of delivering mail by dog teams in winter and by boat in summer, it took many weeks to reach its destination and even then the service cost the department $41,000 a year. Contracts for delivery by airplane called for only some $6,000 additional and instead of giving people of the far north mail once or twice a year they have been receiving service six times each winter. It was further stated that the northern air service under a two-cent rate today is paying its way and has a surplus. These facts should remove the Akavik service from any general plan of cutting out the air mails. Edmonton Journal.

ACIDITY FOR 10 YEARS

Before He Found the Remedy

Many people endure suffering unnecessarily. This man did. If he had known ten years ago what he knows today, he would have been spared a great deal of suffering.

I feel I must write a few lines in appreciation of my Kruschen Salts. I have suffered for 10 years from chronic acidity of the stomach. I tried nearly everything and I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen, which I have taken for the last two months, and I am pleased to say I have had to return of the acidity. —W. B. Kruschen.

Kruschen Salts soothe neutralize and take all the ferment out of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by softening your organs of digestion to permit regular action, Kruschen will prevent this harmful acid from accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more misery after meals. Kruschen will keep your inside clean and serene. Pure and invigorated blood will be sent coursing to every part of your body. You'll feel wonderfully energetic and well. A healthy and hearty as it is humanly possible to feel.

A Matter Of Taste

Externally or Internally. It is simply a matter of taste. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissue, bringing the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will still the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will relieve affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

It has never been pushed by sensational methods, but has simply gone on effecting relief and making new converts.

Nations Will Uphold Britain

Prestige Must Be Safeguarded Or World Will Suffer

Engrossed as we are in our own troubles in Canada, we may not realize how very serious is the situation in the Mother Country. Yet the outward signs visible to the world, are sufficiently alarming. We may be sure, when a Labour Prime Minister must not only interrupt his own holiday but feels it necessary to call into council the leaders of the Conservative and Liberal Parties to devise emergency measures to meet an imminent crisis, that the crisis is grave and, indeed, almost desperate.

British stability is a world asset. If anything serious were to happen to the age-long leader of world finance and trade, the whole world would suffer. It is inconceivable under such circumstances that the prestige of British institutions will not be safeguarded by all the power which the leaders of finance in other nations can bring to bear. Some of them may not relish the opportunity to rush to the rescue of the Colossus of other years, but they will rush. They dare not permit anything really dangerous to occur. Montreal Star.

Scientists Sample

Arctic Sea Bottom

Interesting Report Received By Radiogram From Submarine "Nautilus"

A copyrighted radiogram from the submarine "Nautilus" to the New York American tells how scientists aboard the vessel have sampled the bottom of the Arctic Ocean 5,220 feet from the surface.

The result, says the radiogram from Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, commander of the North Pole submarine expedition, was a column of Arctic mud 17 inches long and one inch thick. It was "broken from the surface for 15 inches and then pale blue, representing the deposits in polar waters of hundreds of thousands or perhaps hundreds of millions of years.

Total attendance was 66,853, with 29,750 attending the grandstand. In view of conditions this operating loss was considered very reasonable and the exhibition management has operated about $5,000 under the amount budgeted in 1930.

Gulf Stream Is Extending And Cold Arctic Waters Receding Much Farther North

Discovery that the Gulf Stream has increased in extent to an unusual degree this year has been made by investigators on the United States patrol boat "General Green," which has been engaged for four months in exploration work in northern waters.

The explorers, including Commander Hackett and Mr. Olin Mosby, formerly associated with the Fridtjof Naesen in oceanographic work in Norway, further discovered that, owing to the exceptionally high temperatures, the cold arctic waters had receded much farther north. Remarkably few icebergs were seen. Enrichment of the Gulf Stream upon the western slope of the Newfoundland banks was found between the forty-first and forty-second parallels to longitude 46 west, then turning sharply north and making another enrichment toward the eastern slope. Temperature at one point in the area was 20 degrees higher than last year.

The "General Green" expedition started north in July to study ocean currents, salinity, temperatures at various depths and the ice drift between Newfoundland and the banks and waters as far north as Hudson Strait. Records of temperatures and salinity at various depths were taken at 122 stations and 2,000 soundings made in many areas between Labrador and Greenland never previously surveyed. No field of ice was encountered on the Labrador Coast, and only 80 icebergs were found in Hudson Strait.

Two hundred icebergs were sighted on the Greenland Coast while anchored against the Ivagait Glacier. Three members of the Courtlandt expedition, surveying the Greenland ice cap, arrived on board. They were Mr. James M. Scott, Mr. Andrew Stephenson and Lieut. Martin Lindsay. All had travelled 400 miles afoot over the ice caps. They had made exceptional time and were in excellent condition. Commander Hackett, beyond stating that fine weather had been encountered, that the crew had enjoyed the best of health, and that the programme had been completed, was reticent regarding details of work as first reports must be made to headquarters.

A Great Benefactor

Pullman, Inventor Of Sleeping Cars,
Born A Hundred Years Ago

One hundred years ago a man named Pullman was born. When he died he left a great fortune and a name that was sure to last. It was Pullman who conceived the idea that something more comfortable than the old compartment carriage might run upon railways. His first cars, with gangways from end to end and provided with comfortable seats and tables for passengers, made their appearance in America between sixty and seventy years ago. They were an immediate success, and in 1874 the Midland Railway Company imported four of them to Great Britain. They were sent over in parts and put together on arrival. Pullmans are new even on nearly all the railways in the world.

Five Billions In Gold

Gold Holdings In United States Will Soon Be Greatest Ever

The pockets of Uncle Sam soon will bulge with more than $5,000,000,000 in gold.

A survey of the gold situation showed that it will be only a matter of a short time before gold holdings in the United States will top the five billion mark for the first time in the history of any nation.

The gold reserve on August 26 amounted to $4,992,000,000, while impending shipments from South America will increase this amount.

A shipment of $4,235,000 is being sent to New York from Argentina on the steamer "Western Prince," and Uruguay plans to send $5,000,000. In addition, receipts of $665,000 from Mexico was reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Canada Selling Wheat

Increased Sales Are Noted Over Previous Year

Although unable to exercise any control over world prices of wheat, Canadian wheat holders last year sold 72,370,675 bushels of wheat more than they sold in 1929-30. They sold this in face of rigorous competition from Russia and Argentina, and in face of several adverse factors. One bushel out of every three shipped in the world in the 12 months ending July 31, 1931, was Canadian.

Despite stiff competition from Russia and the Argentine in the European market and with the Oriental market captured largely by Australia through depreciated currency, Canada last year exported 228,480,103 bushels of wheat and 6,701,665 barrels of flour. This was the equivalent of 258,637,887 bushels, actually exported, an increase of 72,370,675 bushels over the 1929-30 crop year.—Regina Daily Star.

Maple Sugar Production

Maple sugar and maple syrup produced in Canada in the spring of 1931 had an estimated value of $3,537,799, of which the former accounted for $920,800 and the latter $2,616,999. There were 5,484,100 pounds of maple sugar produced and 1,214,760 gallons of maple syrup. The Province of Quebec leading by a wide margin and followed by Ontario.

POLO PLAYER RESCUES KING'S COUSIN

Lady Louis Mountbatten (above), wife of a cousin of King George, and one of the richest women in the world, was rescued from drowning off Cape Antibes, France, by Stephen Sanford (insert), star American polo player, when she was seized by cramps. Brought ashore in a state of collapse, Lady Mountbatten was not revived for some time.

Tramp Steamers Of Late Years Have Been Forced To Give Way To Competition Of Ocean Liners

Advance In Public Health

Mortality Amongst Younger People
Is Still High, Says British Medical Officer

Although great advance had been made in public health this century it was not possible to be satisfied with the position of the general health today, Dr. W. G. Willoughby, medical officer for Eastbourne, said in his address as president of the British Medical Association, at the recent meeting in Eastbourne. He said that the increase in the average duration of life in the present century, averaging more than 12 years, was mainly owing to the decrease in infant mortality, but was partly due to the general lowering of death rates at other ages. Ten per cent. more of the population now reached the age of 50.

"There were far too many deaths at early ages," Dr. Willoughby said. In the registrar-general's latest summary that for 1929 it was shown that rather over one-third of the deaths of males and nearly one-third of the deaths of females, occurred before the age of 50. Omitting deaths of infants—deaths in the first year of life—there were 40,654 deaths of children under 15 and another 29,663 in the next 10 years of life.

Although the vitality of the nation has been steadily improving, the expectation of life is still only 55 years for males and 59 for females. This was one of the points emphasized by Dr. Willoughby.

Cow Wins Honours

Aberdeen Angus Cow Owned In Saskatchewan Carries Off Prizes

"Loch of Moose Jaw," the Aberdeen Angus cow owned by W. J. F. Warren, of Belbeek, Sask., has added another string of honours to its already long list, by carrying away the premier award of the Aberdeen Angus Association of Scotland, both at Saskatoon and at Moose Jaw as well as winning the highest honours at Weyburn, Estevan, Portage la Prairie, Dauphin, Vorkton and Melfort. Mr. Warren had a very successful season this year, particularly at Regina where his herd won nine first prizes, four seconds, two thirds, one fifth and two sixths.

Easily Identified

The lady was quite flattered by the little boy's recognition.

"Do you know all of your mother's friends?" she asked.

"No, mamam," replied the lad, "but I can tell you by your feet."

The tramp steamer which used to ply to the strange ports of the world seeking cargoes probably soon will join the sailing vessel in near-extinction.

A calculation made in London shows that liners, both passenger and cargo, running on regular routes and time, as contrasted with the tramp, comprise about 70 per cent. of the world's tonnage. Liners totalled but 26 per cent. of the world's tonnage in 1913.

The change has been particularly noticeable in the port of London, where, outside the timber trade, there now are very few tramps as compared with pre-war days. Nearly everybody prefers to send goods in "parcels" up to 30,000 tons or more on one of the regular line ships.

Canadian grain for instance, used to cross the Atlantic and Pacific in tramp steamers. Now a large part of it comes across the oceans in the Canadian Pacific's fast cargo liners or in the holds of passenger ships. There are half a dozen regular lines on the north Pacific, formerly a tramp area, and even the River Plate ports are now on the schedules of the liners.

Sea affairs in general have been changed considerably by the shift from tramp steamer to liner. The seaman no longer signs on for a voyage "not exceeding two years," but can tell his wife almost to the day when he will return. Jobs are steadier, for cargo liners stick to their schedule.

But with the passing of the tramp steamer passes some of the last vestiges of the pioneering of another day, and one of the last links between the ship owner and the merchant adventurers of the seventeenth century is broken.

Good Market For Saskatchewan Cattle

Stock Raisers Have Splendid Opportunity For Export To Britain

During the twelve month period ending August 20th, Saskatchewan exported seven hundred and eighty-nine head of beef cattle to Great Britain. These figures have been compiled by W. Waldron, Provincial Markets Commissioner, from weekly returns on the export cattle trade furnished by the Dominion Live Stock Branch, Ottawa.

According to Mr. Waldron, Saskatchewan farmers are not making the most of their opportunity to secure a much larger share of the business. "While it must be admitted," states Mr. Waldron, "that some of our stockers and feeders and their way to Manitoba and Ontario, there still we have a better opportunity to enter the export cattle trade than offers at present through the whole of northern Saskatchewan, and an abundance of excellent feed, water, and cheap grain, provided cattle put on feed are of the right quality."

The following figures show where the cattle exported during the year originated: Ontario, 9,175; Alberta, 2,484; Manitoba, 1,477; Saskatchewan, 789; Quebec, 296; a total of 17,222.

A final point mentioned by Mr. Waldron was that he thought there existed a need for the organization of a greater number of local co-operative shipping points in order that a farmer having two or three head of steers of export quality would be able to ship with his neighbor and not sacrifice a first class animal at a second class price.

Debt Adjustment Act.

The Debt Adjustment Act was passed with a view to preventing unfortunate farmers being put out of business by over-zealous creditors and so long as it was used for this purpose and this alone, it did not come in for a great deal of criticism. Our paternal Brownlee government however, instead of encouraging the farmer to make an effort to meet his obligations, invites him to rush in and take advantage of the act.

The loan companies were driven out of Alberta by legislation, which made it impossible to do business and as a consequence the farmers suffered. The Debt Adjustment Act will make it impossible for merchants to extend credit to farmers and it is an acknowledged fact that many, many homes in western Canada have been kept up during periods of depression by the credit extended to the farmers by the businessmen. Generally speaking, the farmers have appreciated this and tried their best to meet these obligations. But the Debt Adjustment Act gives them a chance now, if so inclined, to place themselves where even the local merchant may be laughed at.

The Granting of Credits to farmers will be curtailed to the limit and as is always the case in paternal legislation, those legislated for, will, in the final analysis be the sufferers. Farmers will be well advised to think very seriously before crawling under the wing of the Debt Adjustment Act.

Dairy Herd Improvement.

Cow-testing for herd improvement is on the increase in Alberta. Figures supplied by Mr. A. G. Moore, senior dairy promoter for Alberta, show there are 448 herds with a total of 4,479 cows on test this year. The northern section has 143 herds with a total of 1,538 cows. The central section with Red Deer for headquarters has 158 herds and 1,484 cows and the southern section has 147 herds and 1,427 cows. Low prices for grain have compelled the agriculturist to market his product in a more concentrated form and the dairy cow has become the more reliable source of income for the farmer at the present time.

To make dairying on the farm a success, only cows with high production should be kept, and by weighing and testing, a good standard of production can be maintained throughout the herd.

"CALL"

While we cannot vouch for the veracity of the following story which was told in all sincerity that it really happened, and here it is:

A lone driver of a truck was proceeding south of the main highway recently between Mowers school and Didsbury, and when opposite a number of sheep which were grazing near the road, the driver halted for a second or two and backed into the ditch that happened to be shallow at that point. This took place near a farmhouse and the owner of the farm, on looking through the window of his home noticed a stranger trying to round-up the sheep and experiencing some difficulty. The farmer man went out to ascertain the cause of the unusual scene and as he walked up to the sheep-herder he was hailed thus: "I'm in the d— of a fix; these d— sheep I was taking to market have jumped the truck," and asked the farmer to help him re-load. Not recognising his own stock, the farmer proceeded to help the man in distress and the sheep were finally corralled safely into the truck, and with "thanks old chap" the truck driver soon disappeared. At night Mr. Farmer counted his sheep, his flock being the seven head short he had so kindly helped the man with unlimited gall to get away with so smoothly. —Ouds Gazette.

Govt. Crop Report.

Issued by the Dept. of Agriculture, Edmonton, October 3rd, 1931.

Cutting of grain is 95 per cent. completed throughout the province. A few late fields of greenfeed in the northern districts remain, but this does not amount to more than about 5 per cent. of the crop area.

The amount of threshing done varies considerably. A period of from one to two weeks of dull, rainy weather caused threshing operations to cease over practically the whole province. The past week has been generally dry and bright and threshing has been resumed South of Calgary about 90 per cent of threshing is completed and this proportion gradually decreases towards the north. In the area east and northeast of Edmonton, threshing is only commenced and will not be general until next week. In the central part of the provinces about 20 per cent. of wheat has been threshed and in the Peace River district about 35 per cent.

Yields are satisfactory in all parts of the provinces with the exception of the dry area. Grades have been adversely affected by prolonged wet weather, a condition which has been rapidly improving within the past few days. With present weather conditions it is hoped that a very large proportion of wheat in the northern districts will receive straight grades in the course of a few days. Very little fall plowing has been done.

Feeder cattle are moving in considerable numbers to feed lots in southern Alberta, particularly in the irrigated areas where there is an abundance of alfalfa and other fodder. There is a considerable movement of cattle out from the dry area to those parts of the province where feed is plentiful. Pasture conditions have been slightly improved in the south by recent rains.

World's Best Loser Widely Mourned

The death of Sir Thomas Lipton, who was the "world's finest loser" as a yachtman is mourned by Britons from the exclusive confines of the Royal Yacht Squadron to the slums of his native Glasgow.

As plans for his funeral went forward, there was much speculation as to the size of his estate and who would inherit it. He never married and was the last of his family. The old rumor that he had set aside a large sum of money years ago to be used in carrying on the assaults against the America Cup after his death, was rejuvenated, but it is too early for definite information.

In accordance with his wishes, Sir Thomas was buried beside the members of his family in Glasgow. The body was taken there by train Tuesday night and the funeral was held Wednesday afternoon with services in St. Columba's Church, London simultaneously.

Pigs are again roaming at large and Mr. Farmer had better examine his bins and see they are not of the leaky type, as last fall some of these omnivorous quadrupeds visited a neighboring farmer and their visit was not appreciated. Another unwelcome visitor was a large skunk seen last Saturday evening heading east on the road between Mr. Archer senior's farm and his son Crosby's place. Another was observed on the same road, east of the latter's farm. These nocturnal prowlers may pay a visit to some nearby chickenhouse in the future.

Lighting Up London

Wonderful Display in Honour of International Illumination Congress

Brighter London arrived in earnest this month. Famous buildings and monuments, ships on the river, the flower beds in the parks and the aerodrome at Croydon are all flooded each night with powerful light, after the method employed so strikingly on the Underground Railway Company's headquarters at St. James's.

Nelson in a golden light, stands out at the top of his column, the Tower Bridge is a great expanse of white against the black background, the spires of Wren churches are thrown into vivid relief against the sky, and so, too, the lofty tower of Westminster Cathedral. The floodlight plays on the clock tower of the House of Parliament, on the County Hall, and on Somerset House.

Fairly effective effects are obtained by means of colours. Particularly striking are the lighting effects on the fountains in Trafalgar Square. Gas is used as well in the general scheme, and there is a demonstration of boulevard lighting in front of St. Thomas' Hospital, along the Embankment.

The occasion for this display is the holding for the first time in England of the International Illumination Congress. Although London was the main point of assembly, visits were paid to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Sheffield, Birmingham and Cambridge.

Montreal Port

British Engineer Speaks Highly of Efficiency of Grain Handling Facilities

High praise for Montreal as a grain handling port was forthcoming recently from a noted authority.

"I think Montreal has the most efficient grain handling facilities of any port of the world," Sir Alexander Gibb, British engineer and expert on the construction and administration of ports, said following a four-hour inspection of the harbour. During that time he saw grain discharged from lake steamers, and from railway cars by the mechanical unloaders and the shakers. He followed the grain through the elevators, walking along miles of conveyors, and saw it loaded into ocean liners for carriage to some foreign port.

Vital Statistics

Reduction Of Deaths and Marriages Shown For Month Of July

According to a bulletin issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, births registered in July in 54 cities of Canada numbered 7,384; deaths 3,627, and marriages, 2,748, as compared with 7,748 births, 3,628 deaths, and 3,174 marriages in July last year, a practically identical figure for deaths and reductions of 1 1/2 per cent. and 13 per cent. in births and marriages respectively.

For the seven months January-July, births showed a decrease of 2 per cent., deaths 4 1/2 per cent., and marriages 11 per cent. from the corresponding seven months of 1926.

Butter Production Increase

Output In Saskatchewan Shows Remarkable Gains This Year

The output of creamery butter in the Province of Saskatchewan for the first seven months of 1927 amounted to 13,437,871 pounds, an increase of 3,948,971 pounds or 30.3 per cent. over the production in the province during the corresponding seven months of 1926. In the month of July this year, the output was 2,809,516 pounds, an increase over July last year of 337,930 pounds or 13.6 per cent. This year's Saskatchewan has produced so far this year enough creamery butter alone to provide each man, woman and child in Canada with more than one pound each. Butter made in Saskatchewan is of notably high quality.

Japan Has Largest

Market In World

Cost Over Eight Million Dollars and Covers Twenty-Nine Acres

Osaka, Japan, is preparing to open the new Osaka central wholesale market, which is believed to be the largest in the world. It covers 29 acres and cost $8,600,000. The buildings, of reinforced concrete, cover 11 acres and comprise wholesale stalls, cold storage warehouses, fruit ripening plants, receiving and shipping sheds and a five storey administration building. The market will have railway and water transportation facilities in the grounds.

PIPER WINS DISTINCTION

The distinction of having piped before two reigning Siamese monarchs went to Piper William Campbell, of New Westminster, B.C., after King Prajadhipok (incognito as Prince Sukhodaya, officially opened the Banff Highland Gathering on Thursday, August 27, at Banff Springs Hotel. In 1894, when King Chulalongkorn, of Siam, father of the present Siamese ruler, visited England, Piper "Willie" Campbell was special piper to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and in that capacity accompanied the two sovereigns wherever they went. In the picture (right), which appeared in the London Graphic of 1894, King Chulalongkorn is shown with Queen Victoria. Piper Campbell is in the left of the same picture. On the extreme left he is shown photographed at Banff, where he has attended the annual Highland Gatherings since their inauguration.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

WHAT CAMR HISTORY? Captain Jimmy is a brave fellow in a dashing uniform, flying General Lee from China to Japan. He is a hero, and he is a hero to try their luck at fishing.

Early the next morning we killed a large trout on the bank of the river. The trout was a good one, and we were to make money. If any ship passed within miles, it would be sure to see our ship.

All day we were plying our trade and plying it here, as we could make a big profit. The trout was a good one, and we were to make money. If any ship passed within miles, it would be sure to see our ship.

The interpreter begged for a chance to try his luck and I let him go first. We selected a little sandy cove, where the water was shallow. At high tide the water formed a clear, shallow pool, and the fish were to be seen. The interpreter begged for a chance to try his luck and I let him go first. Competition Was Keen

Store Offered Customers Bonus For Taking Cakes Away

Two dry goods stores recently went into active competition. One advertised dollar dresses for 69 cents. The other put the same quality dress in the window and priced it 39 cents. After several see-saw reductions the first store announced: "Come in! Dresses free." The other store came back with: "Come in, take a dress free and we give you a nickel!" Both stores were soon sold out.

Queer Thing To Steal

Because tombstones attracted him, Juan Valdez must spend nine months in jail. He was found guilty of stealing tombstones from the municipal cemetery in Juarez, opposite El Paso, in Mexico.

"I don't know why I took them," Valdez said.

"You can think it over nine months," said the court.

The pair looked too funny for words. I began to laugh, when the General gave a sharp exclamation and pointed to the entrance of the fish.

For an instant I froze with dread, a shiver ran down my spine, and I saw the water like an arrow, diving, with a yell I grasped a short sword which General Lee sold me at low price, and plunged into the water between the floating black fish. (See Pic.)

The shark turned and made for me instead. The water swirled my belt—too high for quick action. I waited for the shark to turn, and then I saw the shark's head, and I saw the shark's teeth, sharp as razors, directed menacingly.

I dodged to one side, and binged at his smooth white stomach with my sword. In my excitement I only scratched him, and he turned again, making a wide pass of his head. I saw the shark's head, and I saw the shark's teeth, sharp as razors, directed menacingly.

This time I dove my sword straight down his back. With a great splash and a splash he closed his teeth on the blade and started to turn. I saw the shark's head, and I saw the shark's teeth, sharp as razors, directed menacingly.

"If we had a Nancy, and—and a mother—"

She looked up at him with pleading eyes. Halliday winced, and Uncle Sim said tactfully: "I don't doubt, little girl, but what Sonny'd be real proud to lend you his mother, and his little sister, too, most any time. And you got a daddy you think a whole heap of, or my name ain't Simson Augustus Bartlett."

The child looked up at Halliday with a smile that was sweet as a caress. "Martha Halliday," called Julie from the window, "you got to come right in now and get ready if you're gon' to church with me."

"Seems like Julie Ripps is getting pretty regular in her devotions," commented Simson dryly. "Ain't seen her miss a Sunday in three weeks."

"It's her penitential wave," Martha explained solemnly. "She says there's no use having it if it don't go some where to show it off. It cost twenty-five dollars 'sides her carfare to Summerfield."

"Well, well," chuckled Simson. "It would be a pity if the Lord was to overlook it after Julie's gone to all that expense. I've heard of some strange things being the cause of salvation. Halliday, but I do no but, he'll yer hair crimped, is the strangest yet. You run along, child, and get ready like Julie says. 'Bout everyone has the chance to go to church along beside an expensive head like that!"

"When I grow up I'm going to have one, too," Martha announced solemnly.

"You won't need one," smiled Halliday, rumpiling her curls with a tender hand. "Your good fairy gave you one when you were born."

"You don't get penitential waves from fairies," said Martha, with feminine scorn for his ignorance. "You get 'em at the hairdresser's in Summerfield."

Halliday's laugh carried across the garden to where Nick sat on the porch watching his daughter, while Gay lay in the hammock beside him. He was holding the baby with all the ease of a veteran father, and saying: "Young lady, if you don't grow up the image of your mother, I'll disown you."

Gay smiled.

"Better be careful what you threaten, Daddy. She has her father's straight, aristocratic nose."

"You can't tell about noses this soon," said Nick, grinning. "But anyhow, I'll forgive her the nose so long as she keeps your eye. Wonder what's happening across the way. I haven't heard Halliday laugh like that in a dog's age."

He spoke of it again that evening, when Uncle Sim was indulging in a pre-bedtime smoke in company with their neighbor. The night was still with the stillness of a summer Sunday, and occasionally the rumble of the old mainie chuckle was carried to them on the air.

"Halliday's got a firm ally in Uncle Sim," said Nick. "A year ago who would have dreamed of such a thing? But there's a big change in Halliday. He told me the other day that he was heartily ashamed of some of the stories he's published, though at the time he thought them merely realistic! He's written a book now—a child's book. Just imagine it! It's something he invented for Martha's benefit, and she begged him to write it down. That little girl has done a lot for him, but I've an idea that his reformation's not wholly due to her."

Gay did not speak. She was visioning the night when Halliday had said goodbye to her, before starting out on what had seemed like a hopeless quest. He had called her "a light in the dark." He had kissed her hands gently and reverently, to be sure, but not as one kisses the hands of a sister or a friend. Gay knew what had changed James Halliday, but, since it was his secret, she kept it.

Nick was saying, quietly: "Do you know what I think has changed him, Gay? I think it's this."

She started, visibly.

"Why, why should you think that?"

"Just a hunch, that's all. He's been unhappy, and knowing you—seeing what a woman can be, dear—well, it would mean a lot to a lonely man like Halliday."

A fugitive smile hovered on Gay's lips.

"I don't think it possible that you overrate my virtues? I wonder" (there was the least bit of a pause). "I wonder when Mrs. Halliday is coming back?"

It was the first time she had mentioned Angela, and Nick himself had no desire to speak of her. Now he said: "Not at present. Never to Bakersville, I think. That's what I gathered from something Halliday said."

"You don't mean they've separated?"

"I believe they don't call it a separation, but it amounts to the same thing. She's going abroad for the winter anyhow, and Halliday's to stay here with Martha. She's—I'm not sure, but I think she's a little bit of a flirt. You were right about Mrs. Halliday, Gay. She's not to be trusted."

Gay's hand slipped into his.

"Is that all you have to tell me, dear old boy?"

He looked at her, laughing in a way that would have reassured even a doubting wife, and Gay was very far from being that.

"Are you expecting a tale of intrigue and treachery, my dear? Well, there was intrigue, perhaps, on her part, but no treachery on mine. Do you remember when Uncle Sim expounded the laws of a happy marriage to us? He said if ever I made a fool of myself that I was to own up and you'd forgive me."

"And you made a fool of yourself, Nick?"

"No; that is, not a noticeable fool; but will you forgive me just the same?"

"For what?"

"For not seeing through the lady in the first place."

She smiled.

"What opened your eyes at last?"

"I think," he said slowly, as if he were trying to get at the real truth. "I think that first it was a kiss. Later—"

"A kiss! Nick, you—you—"

Nick grinned.

"Don't get excited, Gay. It was she kissed me, an absolutely surprising and unexpected caress. It—'habber-gasted' me, as Uncle Sim would say. I vowed that night I'd tell you all about it. Hence this confession."

"And—later?"

He turned, meeting her eyes squarely.

"We won't go into that." Unknown to himself Nick's voice had taken on an unfamiliar harshness. "It was only a scene—a scene between Mrs. Halliday, her husband, and myself. It showed me just what she was; and I tell you Gay, James Halliday needs all the sympathy you can give him. I can't say any more about it. I can't even think of it, and stay calm. Some day, perhaps, I'll tell you. Not now. All I ask is that you believe that I've done nothing to be ashamed of."

"I never believed anything else, Nick; only I wondered—"

"Don't wonder."

He drew her close for a long moment, and kissed her gently.

After her journey into a land of doubt and fear, she seemed something exquisitely dear and fragile to him. He said, quietly: "Gay, you should have told me about the baby. It would have saved—"

"I know," she broke in hurriedly. "I know; but I couldn't foresee the things that were to happen, could I? And I was worried about you, Nick. You weren't yourself, Mr. Maxwell saw it as well as I. We knew you needed a change—a chance to get away from all perplexities and worries. Besides, I wanted you to feel free, dear. I have always wanted you to feel free. You shared your freedom with me so generously. I said to myself the day we went away together, when I was tying up that ridiculous handmaiden, that whatever happened I must never by word or look mar the joy of your adventure."

"And life's an adventure to you, Nick, the whole of it. It's just as that, somehow, we have to travel. I've tried, honestly, to help make it the happy highway she wanted you to know; but I've sometimes thought" (Gay smiled, a smile that illumined her face softly like candle-light) "I've sometimes feared, Nick, that I've been responsible for a good deal of dust along the way."

He met her smile with eyes that were wholly serious.

"Dust! I'd say you were the brook that quenched my burning thirst. You have never failed me, Gay. You never will; nor shall I fail you. I've had time to think in these weeks when you've seemed so frail that I've been almost afraid to look at you for fear I'd see you blow away. I've thrashed out this freedom business from A to Z. And I know at last that freedom is not the ability to answer the call of the road at a moment's notice. It's not the shifting of life's responsibilities to other shoulders. It's something within ourselves—this freedom; and once we know it—once we honestly believe it—we are free!"

A silence followed before Gay said gently: "I've known that for a long time, Nick. I could have told you of course, but—but I thought you'd be happier to find it out yourself."

Nick answered, his voice a bit unsteady: "Gay, you are a very understanding person. Gay."

It was dark now on the little porch, and very peaceful. Dim stars shone faintly above; and the air from the garden was sweet with the fragrance of summer. A breeze sprang out of the West, stirring the leaves in the tree-tops, and far in the distance, best-lighting brightened the sky.

Gay rested her cheek contentedly against Nick's shoulder. He smiled, moving his arm to bring her closer, while through the evening stillness came the echo of Uncle Sim's big laugh.

"It's a great old world!" said Nick.

SYMBOLS

Not the thing, or the wave, or the foot.

Is the clod that I love, Though I finger till dusk turns to dark.

As the sky's pageants move, Though I find in the voice of the sea Always comfort and peace,

And that deep in the forest's green aisles, Care will grant me release.

Through the glory of cloud-fight I feel.

To the glory beyond, And I seek for the stars in the sky, Not the stars in the pond.

Not earth's beauties before me that move, But the beauties I guess!

And it is not level hands that I love, But the love they express!

Drakes Of Modern Times

Men Recently Sailed Across Atlantic
In Small Boats

Ten little sailboats set out from Newport on July 1 on a race across the ocean to The Lizard, off Plymouth. The winner, the 63-foot "Dorade," ran into Plymouth Harbour, almost exactly seventeen days out from this side. One of the others had to signal to a passing liner for supplies and to have two of her crew taken off after a storm that partially dismasted her. Having got what she needed, she set off again to make up for lost time.

To set sail across the North Atlantic in a fifty-year-old craft for a race of courage to begin with. There are wicked summer storms that shake up even the biggest liners and in which these cockle-shells would seem to have but the smallest chance of survival. To cross in seventeen days, some of them of light airs, means not only courage but the willingness to take every chance.

We marvel at the courage of the men of old who crossed the Western Ocean in their ships, but the British and American seamen are their worthy successors. The ocean has not changed since 1492 and a 60-foot yacht in the grip of its wrath would be just as helpless as a "Golden Hind" or a "Santa Maria." We still have our Drakes, our de Gamas and our Magellans, even in what is said to be a softer age.

Persian Balm is magical in creating aluring complexion. A little gentle rubbing and your skin is invigorated and touched with the true beauty of youth. Charming fragrance. Delightful to use. Cools and caresses the skin. Relieves all roughness and chafing caused by weather conditions. Tones and stimulates. Enhances and protects the loveliest complexion. Unrivalled as a perfect aid to beauty and charm.

Annual Meeting Of Canadian Clubs
Will Not Be Held This Year

Announcement that the annual meeting of the Association of Canadian Clubs, scheduled to have been held in Regina, September 11 and 12, will not take place, came from Graham Spry, the association's national secretary.

While no official reason for the decision was given out, it is understood that due to prevailing economic conditions the affiliated clubs of the association agreed to a recommendation of the national executive that this year's sessions be eliminated.

According to a report made by Mr. Spry at a recent executive meeting, the association is concluding a most successful year. There are now affiliated with the association 94 of the 105 active Canadian clubs from coast to coast.
